TERM:	SPRING 2026
COURSE TITLE:	Stylistics and Composition
COURSE NUMBER:	SPAN 2804.01 CRN 71752
SECTION TIMES/DAYS:	M/W 11:50 a.m. – 1:30 p.m.
INSTRUCTOR:	Prof. Angel M. Diaz-Davalos

COURSE DESCRIPTION

This course introduces vocabulary, grammatical, and cultural knowledge to develop students' proficiency as Spanish writers and guide them through the process of writing different types of college-level compositions. Students will engage in a variety of textual and essay genres, such as descriptive, narrative, exposition, and argumentative. Through collaborative peer-editing practices, students will develop sophisticated vocabulary and the ability to identify relevant information on distinct topics, as well as to organize their ideas in a coherent and eloquent fashion. Through the readings, discussions, and commentary of texts in literary, journalistic, cinematographic, and academic discourses, students will be able to additionally identify the relationship between text and form, allowing them to recognize literal and implicit meanings and their cultural production context. Additionally, students will participate in a cross-cultural event or related practice in the Los Angeles area. By the end of the course, students will be able to read and write advanced texts and communicate their ideas in a detailed and complex manner. This course is conducted entirely in Spanish.

STUDENT LEARNING OUTCOMES

By the end of the semester, successful students will be able to:

- Demonstrate they have learned rhetorical and grammatical strategies to communicate their ideas effectively and coherently.
- Write texts in Spanish that follow conventions for description, narration, exposition, and argumentation.
- Compose and develop compositions using themes and theses that are developed in an organized manner.
- Show that they can detect and demonstrate ways to improve the style, grammatical, and mechanical accuracy, and coherence of their written compositions.
- Collaboratively and critically analyze and edit texts written in Spanish.
- Demonstrate consistent growth in improving the style, coherence, grammatical, and mechanical accuracy of papers written in Spanish.
- Give individual and group presentations of topics developed during the writing process and/or for class assignments.

PREREQUISITES/RECOMMENDED BACKGROUND

Students should have successfully completed SPAN 2103 or have placed at the upper-division level in the LMU Placement Exam.

COURSE TITLE:	Selected Topics: Latin American Eco-Fictions
COURSE NUMBER:	SPAN 4568.01 CRN 71756
SECTION TIMES/DAYS:	M/W 1:45 pm – 3:25 p.m.
INSTRUCTOR:	Prof. Angel M. Diaz-Davalos

COURSE DESCRIPTION

This course examines the landscapes of extraction, environmental devastation, and resistance in Latin American literature and visual culture. Alongside specific geographic sites, the course engages environmental issues such as toxic pesticide use, mining and extractivist practices, climate change, Afro-Latinx and queer ecologies, and speculative science fiction imaginaries, where urban peripheries and rural areas become spaces of conflict and territorial dispute. The main objective of the course is to analyze how literary and visual texts imagine land not as scenery, but as a contested political space shaped by colonial histories, extractive capitalism, and environmental violence. To achieve this objective, we will draw from ecocriticism, decolonial thought, and environmental humanities, situating Latin American cultural production in relation to global debates on climate change, sovereignty, and environmental justice. Beyond literature, we will approach the subject from interdisciplinary perspectives that may include excerpts from documentary film, journalism, music, photography, and digital platforms. The class is conducted entirely in Spanish.

STUDENT LEARNING OUTCOMES

By the end of the semester, successful students will be able to:

- Recognize and identify the causes and consequences of ecological crises, extractivism, and environmental resistance in Latin America through a transdisciplinary approach from the Humanities and Humanistic Social Sciences.
- Describe how authors, artists, and filmmakers from the Global South portray and define environmental issues in their works, and contrast them to American views on ecology.
- Demonstrate the critical thinking skills needed to continue building the writing, speaking, listening, and reading abilities in the Spanish language at the advanced level.
- Apply contextualist research skills and methods from the Humanities and evaluate the quality of scholarly and non-scholarly sources.
- Organize and develop a project (i.e., midterm project, final research paper, and oral presentation) in the target language through progressive stages that strengthen writing, peer reviewing, and presentational skills.
